“ I met Jason almost 25 years ago at my first job out of college. He sat at the cubicle next to me. I thought he knew everything and I knew nothing. Within hours he had me laughing and I was much more comfortable. What I remember most about Jason is his sense of humor. He had me laughing everyday to the point of tears and I would have to muffle the sound so we didn't get in trouble. Before long we started dating. He told me about his family and it was clear how much he loved them. One day he took me to meet his mother. On the way he told me about her peaches 'n cream (yummy), motorcycles and chicken houses! I got to experience all three. Jason's mom was so welcoming and treated me like family, and yes she made the best peaches' n cream ever! Then he took me to a chicken house. Wow. What a smell. Next were the motorcycles. He offered to take me for a ride down the driveway. Well, before I knew it he was doing a wheelie with me on the back!! I was so scared, but Jason kept me safe. He was always so kind, empathetic, sweet, selfless and the funniest person I've ever met to this very day. I don't understand why these things happen, and I guess I'm not supposed to understand yet. But I know Jason was one of those people that glowed. He showed me pictures of his dad and it gives me comfort knowing they're together. I know his family is feeling so much pain and I'm so sorry for you. I'm so thankful I have such wonderful memories of Jason.
