“ My sister Nancy - for many years, in many ways, she watched over me. As a young child, she made doll clothes for my dolls, pinned my hair up in curls, and polished my nails. As a teen, she let me stay with her for days, weeks, and even one time - months - without ever complaining and always making me feel welcome. As an adult, she washed my hair for me when I had stitches in my scalp, and she broke into my condo to check on me when I was sick and didn't answer the door or phone. Like all siblings, we had our ups and downs, but she was my sister - and I loved her.
